The central Okanagan basin of British Columbia is an area of great Species. It includes food, shelter, and breeding sites for ducks, songbirds, fish, and development. Only small remnants of these forests remain today.