ADVICE TO TRAPPERS

Effective in the fall of 1982, leg-hold traps will be illegal in British Columbia for catching ermine, squirrel, skunk, raccoon, fisher, lynx, bobcat, marten, and wolverine. They will also be illegal for land trapping of muskrat, mink, beaver, and otter.

Leg-hold traps will continue to be allowed for underwater or submerging sets. Modified leg-hold traps or foot snares will be allowed for the trapping of fox, coyote, and wolf.

B.C. Trappers Association CONIBEAR TRAP MODIFICATION

This striker bar modification causes a greater clamping force which increases the speed and humaneness of kill.

The modification is recommended by the B.C. Trappers Association and the Ministry of Environment.

Instructions for Installing Striker Bar

1. All striker bar material is 1/8" thick.
2. The bar on the trigger side of the jaw must have an opening to allow trigger operation as shown.
3. Striker bar should be welded to trap as shown.
4. Striker bar should just bypass the underside of opposite jaw when trap is in sprung position or closed.
5. Sizes of bar are:

| | |
|-------------------------|----------------------|
| Conibear #120 (or #110) | 4 3/4" x 1/2" x 1/8" |
| Conibear #220 | 6 7/8" x 3/4" x 1/8" |
